

X-TREME AND JURASSIC!

Mondays... often pictured as a dreary grey 1990's office cubicle with a sales clerk face-planting his Windows 98 computer keyboard with monotonous angst (perhaps wearing a T-shirt underneath his suit with Garfield stating he too 'Hates Mondays')... is viewed as something far more uplifting by Meadowcroft's Gallery and Primary pupils. That's right guys, Monday means trip day!

This week, the Gallery, Primary and staff were yet again whisked from lessons to lasers on the afternoon of February 25th. Xscape in Castleford, as cool and 'X-treme' as its name suggests (yes, I'm an adult), is and always will be Meadowcroft's go to venue for photonic warfare.

Blue team. Red team. 2 sides, 1 mutual goal... obliterate the enemy cell. Blue Team consisted of our own: Mr Brennan, the Veteran. Brandon, the flash (literally, this boy was faster than his lasers). Dillon, the scout. Kieran, both the distraction... and the distracted. Josh (a Hubber), thought to be our own, was in fact the great betrayer as he mercilessly joined forces with the opposing red team.

Mr Brennan, known for his musical talents gave his team the following advice; "laser tags like a gig... ya keep playing until the crowd drops dead". It has become clear that his enthusiasm, first considered to be a harmless reconnection with his inner-child, was perhaps the indication of a previously undisclosed military past (I have my theories). It was ultimately his ruthless tactics in the field, followed by a devoted team that allowed the blues to seize dominion. However, Josh made a significant impression, garnering the most kill shots overall. Recently admitting that he's grown out of Star Wars (impossible, but whatever), Josh almost proved it with his pin-point accuracy (he certainly doesn't shoot like a Storm Trooper).

Ultimately however, Harem, Matthew, Freddie and Bradley had the right idea as they opted to play round after round of Dinosaur Golf. That's right ladies and gentlemen... Jurassic Golf. Cue John Williams' score please.
