"IF YOU COULD HAVE A POWER..." PART 2 - ARTICLE

Unaware of Mr Hunter's extensive knowledge regarding all things fantastical (and lack of a social life, it would seem), Nick's choice was quickly rendered void; "if only you as flesh and blood can faze through matter, you can be damn well sure that when you faze in and out of a vault that your bounty isn't leaving with you" (ya gotta think of these things). Suffice it to say, Nick was left with a great deal to consider (I mean, can one even faze and not lose his clothes? Just putting it out there).

Alfie chose the ability to fly at first, which was aggressively discouraged by Mr Hunter, quickly banning both 'flight' and 'invisibility' as choices (come on people, we're better than those). After given time to reflect and appreciate such an opportunity (fictitious as it may be), Alfie blew us away with his superpower pick; the power of 'perfect luck'.

OH... AND ARE WE ALL
FORGETTING THAT ALICIA'S BASICALLY BEEN IRON WOMAN THIS WHOLE TIME?

No matter the scenario, no matter the peril or decision, perfect luck allows whatever Alfie does to work in his favour. "So what if you fell off a building, with no parachute?" Mr Hunter asked, seeking to test Alfie's choice. "Then luck would have a bouncy castle move directly below me at just the right time, obviously"... utter genius, my friend. "But what's your power then Mr Hunter... can't be knocking ours without telling us yours!" Nick rightfully asked. The answer's simple ladies and gentleman... the power to shapeshift. Nobodies falling asleep in your English lesson if the teacher can switch between a Kitten and a Velociraptor at a moment's notice...

Happy Easter everybody, see you soon!
